10:00 ~ 10:45	Yukari Takahashi TBLT project: "Create your own kingdom" Aimed at: Young learners, junior high, senior high	This presentation introduces a task-based language teaching project conducted with junior high school students. They created their own kingdoms, including designing a history, national flag, and anthem, using ICT tools. This project aimed to enhance their motivation and creativity in English learning through engaging tasks and collaborative work.
11:15 ~ 12:00	Jo Ando The 21st century young learners classroom - Learner-centered teaching tips Aimed at: Young learners Promoted: Compass Publishing young learners titles.	In this presentation, we'll see how a learner-centered approach can greatly improve students' learning potential. We'll look at what skills we should focus on and how to effectively teach them. Also, we will explore how free digital and online teacher resources, when used effectively in the classroom, can promote learner autonomy and motivation. Come and see how Compass Publishing is
1:00 ~ 1:45	Jo Ando Putting your students first! Motivate your students to communicate Aimed at: JHS, High School and University Promoted: Communicate' and 'Motivate'.	Motivating junior/senior high school and low-level college students to be interested in English can be difficult. This presenter will show how shifting towards a fun, learner-centered approach can achieve results that will leave an impact on lifelong learning. Examples will be taken from David Paul's Communicate and Motivate.
2:15 ~ 3:00	Matthew de Wilde Classroom opportunities for students to genuinely use English Aimed at: Young learners, junior high and senior high school	With an understanding of the massive difference between practicing and using English, teachers can regularly create highly valuable classroom situations for students to actually use English. With English education's focus on memorization for tests, we can also provide more meaningful experiences for students
3:30 ~ 4:15	Nena Nikolic-Hosonaka Practical and timely English textbooks Aimed at: Young learners Promoted: Compass Publishing and Seed Learning young learners titles	How do you choose the right textbook? This presentation explores key criteria for textbook selection, including timeliness, teachability, learnability, engagement, and effectiveness. By examining examples of textbooks that have proven successful in practice, it will demonstrate how these factors contribute to effective and enjoyable language learning experience.
4:45 ~ 5:30	Allyssa Fuller Unleashing student expression: Implementing research-based PBL projects in the ESL classroom Aimed at: Young learners and junior high school	The ability to use English in order to express opinions and ideas is an incredibly important skill for all learners of English. During this seminar, the presenter will discuss how PBL can be used to encourage students to develop their expressive abilities in classrooms of all ages and ability levels.
